What is the problem under consideration? Why is government intervention necessary?

The Act and regulations under which limited liability partnerships (LLPs) form and operate will be out of step with modern company law if the material and relevant parts of the Companies Act 2006 (2006 Act) are not applied to LLPs by new regulations. Without new regulations LLPs will be operating under Companies Act 1985 provisions which have been repealed for companies and will not be able to take advantage of a range of deregulatory measures introduced by the 2006 Act.

For this set of draft regulations we are considering specifically the application of the accounts and audit provisions of the 2006 Act.

What are the policy objectives and the intended effects?

By applying the accounts and audit provisions of the 2006 Act to LLPs, we ensure that LLPs are entitled to the same benefits and savings as companies; remain an attractive corporate vehicle for businesses and retain their distinctive characteristics from companies and other types of partnership. To ensure that businesses in regulated and non-regulated professions continue operating as LLPs under UK law rather than seeking incorporation in other countries. Updating the content and structure of the LLP regulations will simplify them for the users of LLPs and their professional advisers, and reduce the need for them to consult a number of different legislative sources.

What policy options have been considered? Please justify any preferred option.

Option A: Do nothing, which means not applying the relevant and material parts of the Companies Act 2006 to LLPs.

Option B: Apply the relevant and material parts of the Companies Act 2006 to LLPs with textual modification where necessary.

Option C: Achieving Option B by means of a standalone set of regulations setting out in full the provisions as modified (the preferred option). This would make the LLP legislation more accessible for those directly affected and their professional advisers.

When will the policy be reviewed to establish the actual costs and benefits and the achievement of the desired effects?

This will be done as part of the wider evaluation of the impact of the Companies Act 2006.

Ministerial Sign-off:

I have read the Impact Assessment and I am satisfied that, given the available evidence, it represents a reasonable view of the likely costs, benefits and impact of the leading options

Evidence Base for Summary Sheets

1. Introduction

This impact assessment accompanies the draft regulations applying the accounts and audit provisions of the Companies Act 2006 (2006 Act) to Limited Liability Partnerships (LLPs).

The costs and benefits associated with the application of the 2006 Act to LLPs are in part based on the costs and benefits estimated for companies provided by the Companies Act 2006 Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) in January 2007. To be consistent with the Companies Act 2006 RIA the costs and benefits estimated in this IA will be based on 2005 prices. In addition reference is made in this document to the impact assessments produced for the implementation of Directives 2006/43/EC on statutory audits and Directive 2006/46/EC on company reporting, where parallels can be drawn with the implementation of the accounts and audit provisions for companies. These can be found at:

<http://www.berr.gov.uk/bbf/co-act-2006/made-or-before-parliament/page35232.html>

It is important to stress at the outset that there is relatively little in the way of a research base of hard financial information on the costs to business of compliance with existing company law requirements. The quantification of costs and benefits that is available from the original RIA relies heavily on responses from consultees/stakeholders. It is also important to note that this evidence base in the overall RIA is still more substantive than that available for LLPs.

The figures for LLPs also differ because as with the application of the 1985 Act, not all of the 2006 Act provisions are being applied to LLPs. Where necessary, we have made suitable adjustments to the data analysis taking into account the differences between the numbers of LLPs and companies and their different sizes. The resulting figures are only indicative on the basis of the original Companies Act 2006 RIA. On the application of the accounts and audit provisions of the 2006 Act to LLPs it is difficult to quantify the cost and benefits; we therefore refer to the impact assessments on application of the provisions for companies.

In applying the 2006 Act we want to ensure that LLPs remain an attractive corporate vehicle for businesses and maintain an identity distinct from companies. To that extent, the analysis of options has been essentially concerned with the questions:

- What form should the LLP Regulations 2008 take?
- Which provisions of the Companies Act 2006 should be applicable to LLPs?

For the purpose of this Impact Assessment, the costs and benefits analysis covers the following areas:

- Option A: Doing nothing;
- Option B: Regulations making textual amendments to the 2006 Act;
- Option C: A standalone set of regulations; and
- The potential costs and benefits of applying the accounts and audit provisions of the 2006 Act LLPs

A further impact assessment will be produced with the draft regulations applying the remaining provisions of the 2006 Act to LLPs, which it is proposed will come into effect on 1st October 2009, in parallel with the implementation of the remaining provisions of the 2006 Act for companies.

Northern Ireland

In line with the approach taken in the 2006 Act, the LLP regime for Great Britain (GB) will be extended to LLPs in Northern Ireland (NI). We expect the benefits and costs of the Government's proposals on the application of the 2006 Act for NI LLPs to be comparable to those of GB LLPs.

2. Population of LLPs in the UK

* The numbers of LLPs for 2008 are based on the number of LLPs on the 24/02/08.

The figure above shows that the number of registered LLPs is growing, from 1,936 LLPs in 2002 to 24, 555 in 2007. As at 24 February this year, the total number of LLPs on the register is 29,756.

All the top 4 accounting firms are now LLPs. The numbers of law firms opting to convert from traditional partnerships to LLPs continues to rise. Half of the top UK law firms are now LLPs. According to the *Law Society Gazette*⁶, since the LLP Act came into force in 2001, a total of 1,562 of the 8,926 law firms registered in England and Wales have opted to operate as LLPs. This represents 17.4% of all solicitors firms. The number of law firms registering as LLPs in 2006 were 456.

3. Distribution of LLPs

It is important to point out that we draw on the pre-6 April 2008 classification of companies framework in breaking down the number of LLPs into categories of small and medium-sized.⁷ The breakdown is based on the total number of LLPs registered as of May 2007.

Table 1: Break down of LLPs into size categories as of May 2007

	Size
Large LLPs	177
Medium-sized LLPs	303
Small LLPs	8597
Not known ⁸	16,142
Total⁹	25,219

4. Options

The three options selected represent broad choices whilst permitting discussion on some of the detailed points.

Option A: Do Nothing

Do nothing would mean not applying the 2006 Act to LLPs and that LLPs would continue to operate under the provisions of the LLP Regulations 2001. These are ⁶ Law Society Gazette – 30 August 2007.

⁷ The definition of a small company was one that met two out of three criteria relating to turnover, balance sheet total and number of employees in their first financial year, or in the case of a subsequent year, in that year and the preceding year: turnover not more than £5.6 million (£6.5m as of April 2008), balance sheet total not more than £2.8 million (£3.26m as of April 2008), number of employees not more than 50. The definition of a medium-sized company was one that met two out of three criteria relating to turnover, balance sheet total and number of employees: turnover not more than £22.8 million (£25.9m as of April 2008), balance sheet total not more than £11.4 million (£12.9m as of April 2008), number of employees not more than 250.

⁸ We assume that most of these are small LLPs.

largely based on the Companies Act 1985, which for companies will be in most parts repealed. By not amending the LLP regulations LLP law would be out of step with modern company law. It would also mean a twin-track approach under which the 2006 Act is applied to companies, but the 1985 Act continued for LLPs. This option would increase the complexity of business law, confusing business and their professional advisers and increase costs. In addition, it would deny LLPs the opportunities to take advantage of a range of deregulatory measures introduced by the 2006 Act.

The 2006 Act Impact Assessment prepared in January 2007 calculated that the total benefit of the company law reform measure for companies is in the region of £160 million to £340 million per annum. Estimating the actual benefits for LLPs is very difficult; however, implementing the 2006 Act could result in benefit of between £3.8 million to £8.1 million which will not be realised if this option is adopted. This is based upon a pro rata figure of dividing the total number of LLPs by the total number of private companies and then multiplying it by the estimated benefit, i.e. $(29,756/1,245,000) \times £160$ million and $(29,756/1,245,000) \times £340$ million. In relation to the application of the accounts and audit provisions of the 2006 Act to LLPs we estimate the benefit embedded in the overall benefit calculated above to be approximately £0.9 million. This is based upon a pro rata figure of dividing the number of LLPs by the total number of private companies and then multiplying it by the estimated benefit in relation to the account and audit provisions of the 2006 Companies Act, i.e. $(29,756/1,245,00) \times £36.73$ million. Any comparison of numbers of LLPs against the numbers of companies requires two caveats: not all aspects of the 2006 Act will apply to LLPs. Also the size distribution of companies is probably different from that of LLPs. The figures above are therefore a maximum figure and only indicative on the basis of the original 2006 Act Impact Assessment.

Option B: Amendment

This is the obvious, but not the preferred option. Doing this would mean applying the relevant provisions of the 2006 Act to LLPs with a series of general and specific modifications without setting out the modified legislation in full. This is currently the form which the LLP Regulations 2001 take. They are already a complex set of regulations for LLPs and their advisers to interpret. By producing a further set of amending regulations the position for LLPs would become even more complex.

The underlying assumption of this option, as in option C below, is that LLPs would have the opportunity to benefit from any cost savings arising from the application of the 2006 Act as for companies. From the calculated figure above the expected benefit is in the region of between £3.8 million to £8.1 million and in respect of the application of the accounts and audit provisions of the 2006 Act to LLPs could be £0.9 million.

The risk of option B over option C is that by only textually amending the provisions of the 2006 Act which are applied, the LLP regulations would be less user-friendly, and LLPs would run the risk of not benefiting from the comparable savings arising from reducing the complexity of the law.

It is important to stress that the 2006 Act was structured in order that the provisions that apply to small companies are much easier to understand. Where the law is hard to understand, there are significant costs, uncertainty and risks and compliance is reduced. SME representatives estimated that presenting the 2006 Act in an accessible and user-friendly fashion resulted in savings in the region of £30 million per annum for companies. It is expected that some of this simplification benefit of the 2006 Act would be realised under this option. However, with this option, LLPs and their advisers are likely to spend more time establishing what the relevant legal provisions are, by consulting both company law and LLP law. The “cost” of this option is the continued uncertainty and legal costs of applying company law to LLPs rather than having stand-alone regulation. We do not have any figures on what this might be.

It was estimated that introducing the 2006 Act would cost companies in the order of £10 million to £20 million. Based on this simple calculation, the direct costs associated with the application of the 2006 Act to LLPs would be in the region of £0.2 million to £0.5 million. This estimate is based upon $(29,756/1,245,000) \times £10$ million and $(29,756/1,245,000) \times £20$ million. We believe it would therefore also follow that the direct costs of introducing the 2006 Act provisions on accounts and audit for LLPs would be £0.08 million. This estimate is based upon a pro rata figure of dividing the number of LLPs by the number of companies and then multiplying it by the estimated cost in relation to the account and audit provisions of the 2006 Companies Act i.e. $(29,756/1,245,000) \times £3.3$ million.

Option C: Standalone

The option proposed is a standalone set of regulations restating provisions of the Companies Act 2006 as applied to LLPs with appropriate modifications, and two sets of accompanying accounts regulations, one set for small LLPs and one set for medium-sized and large LLPs. The assumption is that the LLP Regulations are structured in order that the provisions that apply to LLPs are much easier to understand. This would make the LLP legislation far more accessible for LLPs and professional advisers; reduce the time it takes to cross-reference the regulations with other companies legislation and lessen the complexity of the law for LLPs. This option is consistent with the Government's policy of simplification and "think small first" agenda.

As with option B above, under this option, LLPs would benefit from some of the cost savings that companies will enjoy as the 2006 Act comes into effect. We estimate that for LLPs, this will be in the region of £3.8 million to £8.1 million per annum. The benefit of Option C over Option B is that it would lessen the complexity of LLP law and will bring additional benefits in the region of £0.7 million per annum for LLPs. This 0.7 million additional benefit of option C is based on a pro rata figure of dividing the total number of LLPs by the total number of private companies and then multiplying it by the estimated benefit of having 2006 Act presented in an accessible and user friendly manner i.e. $(29,756 / 1,245,000) \times 30$ million. The expected total benefit of this option is in the range of £4.5 million to £8.8 million per annum.

Under this option, there could be some limited familiarisation costs. These are not expected to be significant.

Table A below is a summary of the options with top-down calculations.

Options	Cost (per annum)	Benefit (per annum)
Option A: Do Nothing	£3.8 million - £8.1 million	Not applicable
Option B: Amendment	£0.2 million - £0.5 million	£3.8 million - £8.1 million
Option C: Standalone	£0.2 million to £0.5 million	£4.5 million - £8.8 million
Total	£0.2 million to £0.5 million	£4.5 million to £8.8million

5. Costs and Benefits

We are doing top-down and bottom-up calculations but for summary use top-down numbers. The top-down approach focuses on each of the options, and the bottom-up approach estimates the costs and benefit of those provisions that are expected to have the biggest impact on LLPs.

Benefits

Estimating the direct savings is very difficult. It is relatively easy to establish that a particular regulatory requirement is essentially redundant and should be amended or removed, but it is more difficult to establish what the monetised impact of this action will be. As earlier noted, the 2006 Act Impact Assessment estimated that the total direct benefits of the company law reform measures could be of the region of £160 million to £340 million per year for companies. Currently there are approximately 29,756 LLPs on Companies House Register. The analysis has been re-adjusted to reflect the different characteristics of LLPs in relation to companies and re-calibrated to reflect the number of current LLPs. It indicates the total benefits of applying the 2006 Act to LLPs could be in the region of £4.5 million to £8.8 million per annum and £0.9 million per annum in respect of applying the accounts and audit provisions only.

Costs

Direct Costs

Against total benefits of between £4.5 million to £8.8 million per annum there are only a handful of areas where the 2006 Act introduces new or more burdensome regulatory requirements, of a sort that might in principle increase compliance costs. It has been shown above that introducing the Companies Act 2006 would cost companies in the order of £10 million to £20 million. Based on this simple calculation, the direct costs associated with the application of the 2006 Act to LLPs would be in the region of £0.2 million to £0.5 million. This estimate is based upon $(29,756/1,245,000) \times £10$ million and $(29,756/1,245,000) \times £20$ million. Embedded in the total direct cost is the direct cost associated with the application of the accounts and audit provisions of the 2006 Act. This is calculated at £0.08 million.

6. Accounts and audit provisions of the 2006 Act applied by the draft regulations

Accounts and Auditors' Reports

The restatement of the accounts and auditors' report provisions in a more coherent way will make it clearer to users which provisions affect which category of LLP, whether small, medium-sized or large. Some limited familiarisation costs are likely, but these are not expected to be significant. It is important to stress that the monetised benefits of simplification of the accounts provisions are embedded in Option C above, which is estimated to bring additional benefits in the region of £0.7 million per annum for LLPs.

Following the policy of applying the 2006 Act to LLPs, where appropriate (with modification), we are applying to LLPs the increased financial thresholds for the determination of whether a company or group qualifies as small or medium-sized for the purposes of certain accounting and audit exemptions.

We are also applying to LLPs the option available to companies of including financial instruments in the accounts at a fair value, as provided for by Directive 2006/46/EEC. Similarly, disclosures in the notes to accounts of related party transactions and off-balance sheet arrangements will be applied to LLPs in the same way as for companies.

It is difficult to assess the costs and benefits of applying these provisions to LLPs, but we feel a parallel can be drawn with those covered in the impact assessment prepared for Directive 2006/46/EEC. This can be found at:

<http://www.berr.gov.uk/bbf/co-act-2006/made-or-before-parliament/page35232.html>

Auditors and Statutory Auditors

At this stage, it is difficult to monetise the costs and benefits of this proposal for LLPs in general. It is expected that associated benefits and costs should be similar to those of companies (with adjustment for numbers of LLPs). The impact assessment for Directive 2006/43/EEC gives an indication of the cost. This can be found at:

<http://www.berr.gov.uk/bbf/co-act-2006/made-or-before-parliament/page35232.html>

Implementation Costs

There will be some changes to the law governing the accounts and audit LLPs, and there will be some implementation cost. However, it is expected that these implementation costs would be minimal.

Familiarisation Costs

In addition to the direct costs associated with the proposed application of the accounts and audit provisions of the 2006 Act to LLPs, there will also be some familiarisation costs associated with any new legal requirement. These costs are not expected to be significant. Professional advisers will need to become familiar with the new law, but these professions have established programmes of continuous professional development that will in due course cover the changes to company and LLP law. Although the cost of all professional training is ultimately passed on to clients, we do not expect to see an increase in fees charged to LLPs as a result of the proposed legislative changes.

7. Specific Impact Tests

Competition Assessment

This proposal will have no significant adverse impact on markets. The application of the 2006 Act to LLPs will affect all LLPs. However, these costs and benefits do not appear to be sufficiently large to affect competition between LLPs of different sizes. The application of the 2006 Act to LLPs will not impose different costs on new and existing LLPs.

Small Firms Impact Test

The reforms to LLP law have been guided by “Think Small First” principles and have been formulated with small enterprises in mind. Proposals have been designed so that wherever possible regulation is proportional to firm size, existing regulation simplified and presented in a coherent and accessible form. We estimate using FAME that one-third of those which could be classified were small and most of those unclassified were also likely to be small. The vast majority of these LLPs are also exempt from audit requirements. We estimate that there will be substantial benefits to all LLPs including small sized enterprises.

Legal Aid

There will be no impact on Legal Aid

Sustainable Development, Carbon Assessment, Other Environment

We do not believe that there will be any impacts on these areas.

Race Equality, Disability Equality and Gender Equality

We do not believe that there will be an impact on the equality strands as the proposals impact on LLPs not on individuals. We have, however, looked at each of the equality impact initial tests individually and are confident that there is no impact.

Human Rights

We do not believe that there will be an impact on Human Rights.

Rural Proofing

We have looked at the initial test on rural proofing and are confident that there is no impact on rural communities.

8. Enforcement, sanctions and monitoring

The proposed reforms will provide greater clarity to questions as to who is liable for a particular breach in a particular set of circumstances. It is expected that the new regime will lead to greater understanding by participants of the requirements they are under and, potentially, to better levels of compliance. However, the reforms are not expected to lead to changes in enforcement patterns, and overall prosecution levels are unlikely to be significantly affected. Enforcement will, as now, rely on a variety of means depending on the nature of the breach (for example, Companies House will be responsible for enforcing penalties for late filing of accounts and similar offences).

9. Implementation and delivery plan

The Regulations will be designed to be as facilitative as possible. After commencement individual LLPs will be able to take advantage of new optional provisions on a case-by-case basis in the manner best suited to their specific needs

Objective and Success Criteria

The Government's objective in its method of implementing the measures in the 2006 Act for LLPs will be to ensure that LLPs are well sighted on the deregulatory opportunities made available by the Act, so that they can make informed choices on how they best wish to operate and can take advantage of them. An important success criterion will be the extent to which feedback from LLPs confirms that the amending regulations are simpler and more flexible in their effect. The focus on stakeholder feedback for the RIA on the 2006 Act in part reflects the difficulty of making concrete monetised assessments of the impact of company law measures. However, company law is essentially facilitative and the intention behind the measures is often to give companies flexibility and choice, rather than to ensure that they necessarily operate in any one particular way. Responses to the consultation from stakeholders have been considered and as part of the post-consultation process we have looked at the measures that can be monetised, to assess again the expected benefits and costs of the proposals. In line with the implementation of the 2006 Act, we will monitor and review the impact on LLPs.

Consultation and Compliance

It is important to recognise that there is generally speaking no "LLP police" for ensuring compliance with the requirements of company law. The registrar (Companies House) and BERR prosecutors have limited remits associated with some of the non-permissive provisions in the Act (for example provisions associated with the register of members and the preparation and filing of accounts). Notwithstanding some specific measures, the 2006 Act on balance reduces rather than adds to the number of strict requirements in the company law regime, and no particular compliance difficulties are anticipated.

Resource Requirements

There will be some set-up and implementation costs for Companies House in respect of certain measures in the Act, such as facilitating electronic filing. As a minimum there will be some one-off costs of training and familiarisation for staff, as well as systems costs in some areas. It is likely, as with companies, that these costs will be passed on to LLPs in the form of increased transactions costs. However, such increases should be more than compensated for by the cost-savings to LLPs of the new arrangements.

Communications

A simpler law, which "fits small business reality" better, will greatly increase business confidence in the overall regulatory environment and increase compliance. Companies House already provides extensive and well respected plain English guidance both in booklet form and increasingly through their website. In line with this there will be guidance available for LLPs.

Disproportionate Impact

As stated in the competition assessment (Section 7 above) analysis indicates that the proposed Act will not adversely affect competition between new and existing LLPs, or between LLPs of different sizes.

Commencement and Implementation

Companies House will play a major role in implementing the LLP Regulations as they are commenced. They will have to make changes to their processes and systems to ensure they are ready to provide the best service to their customers when the provisions of the Regulations come into force.

10. Summary

The Government believes that the proposals set out in this IA will improve the performance of LLPs across the economy as a whole, and reduce direct compliance costs for business. Although the majority of provisions are evolutionary rather than revolutionary in nature, taken together they represent a huge step forward in ensuring that LLP law and company law are up to date, flexible and accessible for all who use it. Overall, improvements will translate to a total net benefit in the region of £4.3.million - £8.3 million per annum, assuming minimal costs. A further draft impact assessment will be produced with the draft regulations applying the remaining provisions of the 2006 Act to LLPs, which are due to be published for comment over the summer.
